Dear Readers,

The publication of the 100th edition of the Law of the Sea Bulletin provides a welcome opportunity to reflect upon the role of the Bulletin, which serves as a reference document and informs of recent developments with respect to the law of the sea. The 100th edition coincides with another important milestone, namely, the twenty-fifth anniversary of the entry into force of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea, on 16 November 1994.

The first edition of the Bulletin was published 35 years ago, in September 1983, as a means to provide for the broad dissemination of information on law of the sea matters and to promote awareness of the activities undertaken in connection with the Convention. It was also a convenient compilation of information relevant to maritime spaces.

Today, the Bulletin remains an important source of information about maritime spaces. It serves as a repository of communications from States, informs of the adoption of national legislation and of the conclusion of bilateral agreements and multilateral treaties. It reflects developments with respect to international jurisprudence concerning the delimitation of maritime boundaries and provides references to the documents of the General Assembly and the Security Council of the United Nations. As such, the Bulletin continues to be a valuable resource for Governments as well as researchers and, more generally, anyone interested in these,
