DESCRIPTION OF REQUIREMENTS

The United Nations (UN), Department of Operational Support is looking for information from potential qualified suppliers/manufacturers to provide a range of modern generation of standard and compact field-deployable digital medical imaging/radiology equipment and related services that can seamlessly support integration with telemedicine solutions/services available at the UN deployment locations globally.

Important Considerations:

- All solutions are to be deployed at UN field hospitals, primarily in austere environments.
- It is highlighted that the offer should include all accessories such as detectors, chest stands, image viewing software, screens/monitors, and operator and patient protection equipment (e.g., lead aprons, thyroid shields) required for the equipment to be fully operational upon deployment.
- Vendors are encouraged to include additional available services in their offers, such as AI integration for image analysis and interpretation, teleradiology services, and specific training components relevant to the use of handheld ultrasound systems for FAST assessments by non-expert users. If AI integration is offered, vendors should clearly specify the name of the AI solution, the version, targeted pathologies, regulatory clearance status, and the name of the AI vendor (if offered through a third party). Potential AI solutions of interest may include trauma analysis and assessment algorithms for chest, abdominal, skeletal radiographs, and ultrasound images.
