A. Case concerning the Conservation and Sustainable Exploitation of Swordfish Stocks in the South-Eastern Pacific Ocean (Chile/European Community)

Following an agreement between Chile and the European Community, the Tribunal, by Order dated 20 December 2000, formed a Special Chamber to deal with a dispute between Chile and the European Community concerning the conservation and sustainable exploitation of swordfish stocks in the South-Eastern Pacific Ocean, and made provision in respect of preliminary objections and for the filing of the written pleadings in this case.

By separate letters dated 9 March 2001, the parties informed the President of the Special Chamber that they had reached a provisional arrangement concerning the dispute and requested that the proceedings before the Chamber be suspended. In their letters, each party reserved its right to revive the proceedings at any time. Further to the request of the parties, the President of the Special Chamber, by Order dated 15 March 2001, extended the time-limit for making preliminary objections. Under the Order, the time-limit of 90 days for the making of preliminary objections would commence from 1 January 2004 and each party would have the right to request that the time-limit should begin to apply from any date prior to 1 January 2004.

B. The “Volga” Case (Russian Federation v. Australia)

On 2 December 2002, an Application under article 292 of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea was filed by the Russian Federation against Australia for the release of the vessel Volga and three members of its crew. Australia filed its Statement in Response with the Registry on 7 December 2002. The vessel Volga was arrested by Australian military personnel beyond the limits of the exclusive economic zone of the Australian territory of Heard Island and the McDonald Islands for alleged illegal fishing in the Australian fishing zone. Australian authorities seized the vessel including the catch, nets and equipment. Three members of the crew were charged with criminal offences and were admitted to bail on certain conditions.

The Russian Federation submitted that the bond sought by Australia imposed conditions for the release of the vessel and the three members of the crew which were neither permissible nor reasonable under article 73, paragraph 2, of the Convention. Australia maintained that the bond sought by the Australian authorities was reasonable and requested the Tribunal to reject the application made by the Russian Federation.

On 23 December 2002, the Tribunal delivered its judgment. The Tribunal unanimously found that it had jurisdiction to entertain the application made by the Russian Federation, and that the application, with respect to the allegation of non-compliance with article 73, paragraph 2, of the Convention, was admissible.

Dealing with the Applicant's allegation that the Respondent had not complied with article 73, paragraph 2, of the Convention concerning the release of the vessel and its three crew members, the Tribunal referred to the "Camouco" Case where it had indicated factors relevant in an assessment of the fishing equipment and is not in dispute between the parties, is reasonable in terms of article 292 of the Convention.

With respect to the three crew members, the Tribunal noted that, according to information it received from the parties during its deliberations, the Full Court of the Supreme Court of Western Australia upheld the appeal of the three officers of the Volga on 16 December 2002 and ordered that they be permitted to leave Australia upon the amount of bail already posted, and was informed that the officers left Australia on 20 December 2002. The Tribunal therefore considered
