

Max-min procedure to convert indicators into indices

In order to construct indices whose values can range between 0 and 100, the minimum and maximum admissible values—also known as lower and upper bounds—must first be determined. The C I bases these bounds on the distribution of indicator values among all developing countries "see tables III.1 and III.# in the