Commission on Population and Development 46th session April 23 2013 Statement by Ms. Judith King

	Senior Perpander Marona IDC Decal-1-1- In-Air-1
		_
•		_
	· ·
,	7
1.1
,
		=
_
		_
	Thank you Mr. Chairman.
	At the outset, allow me to thank you, Mr. Chair, for your able stewardship of the 46th session of the Commission on Population and Development. I would also like to thank the other members of the Bureau for their leadership, as well as the Secretariat for their invaluable work
•	Migration is a global issue that is gaining more and more attention—particularly as the international
 	Migration is a global issue that is gaining more and more attention—particularly as the international community begins to reflect on the development agenda beyond 2015.
·	community begins to reflect on the development agenda beyond 2015.
	community begins to reflect on the development agenda beyond 2015. The link between migration and development is not new. What is new, however, is the increasing speed of community begins to reflect on the development agenda beyond 2015.
	community begins to reflect on the development agenda beyond 2015. The link between migration and development is not new. What is new, however, is the increasing speed of
	The link between migration and development is not new. What is new, however, is the increasing speed of global mobility—and its effects, whether positive or possitive council is increasing.
	community begins to reflect on the development agenda beyond 2015. The link between migration and development is not new. What is new, however, is the increasing speed of
	The link between migration and development is not new. What is new, however, is the increasing speed of global mobility—and its effects, whether positive or possitive council is increasing.
	The link between migration and development is not new. What is new, however, is the increasing speed of global mobility—and its effects, whether positive or possitive council is increasing.
	The link between migration and development is not new. What is new, however, is the increasing speed of global mobility—and its effects, whether positive or possitive council is increasing.
	The link between migration and development is not new. What is new, however, is the increasing speed of global mobility—and its effects, whether positive or possitive council is increasing.
	The link between migration and development is not new. What is new, however, is the increasing speed of global mobility—and its effects, whether positive or possitive council is increasing.
	The link between migration and development is not new. What is new, however, is the increasing speed of global mobility—and its effects, whether positive or possitive council is increasing.
	The link between migration and development is not new. What is new, however, is the increasing speed of global mobility—and its effects, whether positive or possitive council is increasing.
	The link between migration and development is not new. What is new, however, is the increasing speed of global mobility—and its effects, whether positive or possitive council is increasing.
	The link between migration and development is not new. What is new, however, is the increasing speed of global mobility—and its effects, whether positive or possitive council is increasing.
	The link between migration and development is not new. What is new, however, is the increasing speed of global mobility—and its effects, whether positive or possitive council is increasing.

Commission on Population and Development 46th session April 23 2013

Statement by Ms. Judith King Senior Researcher, Myers-JDC-Brookdale Institute, Israel

in times of turmoil—and were forced to leave their economic capital behind. There were high rates of people who were elderly, disabled, sick and devoid of work capacity.

Mr. Chairman,

Israel developed a broad range of policies and initiatives to facilitate the integration of new immigrants
A4
- Au y V''
.
•
i ,
-
9
·
§ -

Commission on Population and Development 46th session April 23 2013

Senior Researcher, Myers-JDC-Brookdale Institute, Israel improving their achievements in matriculation exams and reducing their drop-out rate, by providing scholastic assistance and emnowerment and leadership training. A variety of programs also exist to assist