My name is ____ and I am speaking on behalf of the International Planned Parenthood Federational leading advocate and service provider of sexual and reproductive health and rights IPPF welcomesthe 55th session of the CPD'special theme offPopulation and sustainable development, in particular sustained and inclusive economic growth" and the opportunity to address the Commission.

This year's theme presents an opportunity to integrate population in development strategies and to address thenterlinkages between population, sustained usive economic growth and poverty. Gender equality, human rights and in particular SRHR has profound implications for social development, as well as sustained and inclusive economic growth. At individual societal and macro levels, access to and fulfillment of hungats and fundamental freedoms, in particular SRHR, enables all people, particularly women and girls, to participate in social life, to access education and to participate in a sustaination and equal access to the economy.

Education is widely recognised as a powerful tool to empower women and girls within the family and society and is considered a key pathway to employment. Educated women are more likely to marry later, use family planning and access healthcare and understand theilmritghists:egard, comprehensive sexuality education is a promising strategy by which to shift norms and attitudes and empower young people to negotiate safetconsensualelationshipsWe regret that this has not been included in the outcome resolution this year hope to see it adequately reflected in next year's theme which will focus on population, education and sustainable development.

On the other hand, ownen and young women face added vulnerabilitiæred multiple and intersecting forms of discrimination beneding on where they work in the economy which can lead to a gendered gap in productivity and earnings. Although the percentage of women working in formal employment worldwide has increased over the past half century, women around the globe

In addition to these, humanitarian crises as well as the impacts of thep@modelmic continue to affectmany of the world's poorest countriesaving the most marginalized communitieshind Humanitarian, health and climate crises halver astating impaston the most vulnerable and marginalized groups, while exacerbating inequalities, both within and between countriess regard, universal social protection services includingly service must be an integral part of short and longterm government planning and recovery processeller is critical for advancing JHQGHU HTXDOLW\ KHDOWK DQG ZHOO)EHLQJ DQG IRU strengthening individuals' and communitiessilience and capacity to adapt to environmental ills including the climate crisis.

In line with the above points, IPPF recommends governments to:

x Ensure implementation of Comprehensive Sexuality Education (CSE) programmes, as well as enforce legislation that addresses and eliminates sekilaits Servov to 10 (dofc) - 13 (2)5 17 (t) 33 16)50 J