

Sweden, together with Brazil, Philippines, Zambia, UNESCO, UNICEF, and Global Partnership for Education, will host a dynamic event featuring speakers from across the world, including education and health policy makers, development partners and young people, to highlight the positive and transformative impact of education and school health and nutrition on health and well-being. This transformation yields a triple dividend by impacting the lives of children and adolescents today, their adulthood, and the generation of children to come. For example, school feeding programmes deliver US$9 in returns for every US$1 invested, and school programmes that address mental health can potentially provide a return on investment of US$21.5 for every US$1 invested. The event will show-case the linkages between education, health and well-being, and how countries can best invest in the health, growth and development of learners through an integrated approach to school health and nutrition.

11 April 2023

90 minutes (1:15 pm – 2:45 pm)

: Conference Room 8, United Nations Headquarters, New York

A 90-minute in-person event (with potential for virtual participation of speakers as needed) involving a mix of speakers from Member States, experts, and youth representatives

Delegations, observers and other participants to the 56th session of the CPD.

English (no simultaneous interpretation available)

The 56th session of the Commission on Population and Development (CPD), to be held from 10-14 April 2023, will feature the special theme of population, education and sustainable development. It is closely related to Chapter XI of the Programme of Action

