resilience of families, communities, and nations, but are also proven to be cost-effective and cost-saving, freeing resources for investment in other development priorities. ¹

Despite the proven returns on investments, goals set by the ICPD remains unfulfilled, particularly those related to SRHR, and it is no coincidence that the Millennium Development Goal on improving maternal health (MDG 5) has been among the furthest behind. These commitments are also reflected in the Sustainable Development Goals² and w costs of the investments required to fulfill women's, girls, young and adolescents (in all their diversity) rights. These investments have multiple high payoffs that will bolster poverty eradication and drive inclusive sustainable development.

Objective

The session's objective is to present recommendations on how to accelerate progress toward financing ICPD and SDGs through debt relief and reforms to the international
