

The Interregional Approach of Measuring Population Second Session on Aging in the Global Development Agenda

Keisuke Nakashima
Associate Professor, Kobe City University of Foreign Studies

Expert Group Meeting on Measuring Population Aging: Bridging Research and Policy
Bangkok, Thailand, February 25, 2019

First of all, I would like to thank the organizers for inviting me to this important meeting. I am truly honored to be here and, together crises, risk of slowing development before they grow rich or mature, or even all these lead to social and political unrest.

I sometimes describe China's and other emerging and developing countries' situations something like this—particularly among those, including myself, who are engaged in revitalizing aging and depopulating rural areas.

system wheredrydr4ladrya