

The Euro area economy's forward momentum looks solid and growth is expected to remain above potential through 2008. Slowing house price inflation in some countries suggests the possibility of weaker residential construction going forward. Labor markets continue to

