
Statement by Ambassador Michele Sison
On Agenda Item 134: Management Reform
Main Session of the Fifth Committee, 72nd General Assembly
December 4, 2017

[As Delivered]

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

On behalf of the United States, I would like to thank the Secretary-General for presenting his management reform proposals "Shifting the Management Paradigm." Mr. Secretary-General, my delegation applauds your steadfast leadership as well as your personal engagement on reforming the United Nations so that it better serves the people we all represent. I would like to further thank Mr. Carlos Ruiz Massieu, Chairman of ACABQ, for the Committee's related report.

Mr. Secretary-General,

As we focus on these management reform proposals in the coming weeks, we continue to support your efforts to look across the entire system to find ways the United Nations can better deliver in development, management, and peace and security. With more focused, efficient and effective UN operations, the UN will be better able to perform the mission that we have charged you and your team to undertake.

The United States seeks a United Nations that maintains the trust of the people around the world. In order to realize a truly effective UN that remains relevant, we agree that the UN must change the way it does business, including by focusing more on delivering results in the field rather than on intergovernmental and other bureaucratic processes at headquarters. We must also strive for enhanced accountability and oversight in conjunction with giving you the tools necessary to do the job.

initiatives to streamline business processes and provide the critical information needed to make the Organization smarter and leaner.

We, member states, must also be willing to change business as usual. We note the broad, cross-regional support that was on display at the UN reform event hosted by President Trump in September. With 133 signatories, we hope this translates into timely action to support your management reform proposals. At a minimum, you should be given the opportunity to bring forward detailed proposals in May for further, more extensive consideration by Member States. We look forward to General Assembly endorsement of the vision that your initial report has
