

Our support has not wavered. However, Mr. Chairman, management reform is nothing without results or accompanying accountability and transparency on all processes such as budgeting, and procurement within the UN. We expect to see further tangible results from process improvements and impact-based management; our collective investment deserves no less.

The ACABQ astutely notes that the benefits resulting from the implementation of the management reforms must be explicitly attributable, through an evidence-based approach, to the main objectives of the reform, namely: supporting program delivery, mandate implementation, and greater accountability. We wholeheartedly endorse this observation.

Mr. Chairman
