

Nations to address the issue of major environmental threats like global climate change. However there are also positive signs. As I have personally seen during the floods in my country, there are several very visible examples of cooperation in the field of post-disaster help and mitigation throughout the international community. This gives me hope concerning the future coordinated global efforts to decrease human, environmental, economic and social losses from disasters.