

boundary effects of polluting and degrading substances to the detriment of present and future generations.

We take note of the reference to the "common but differentiated responsibilities" principle, which is recurrent in international environmental instruments.

Last, my Delegation stresses the distinction between "enforcement procedure" under Draft guideline 11, paragraph 2, letter b), and the invocation of international responsibility. To that effect, Italy can accept paragraph (5) of the Commentary to Draft guideline 11.

proposals for draft articles. Meanwhile, the content of the sixth report appears to be in general terms quite balanced with respect to the questions addressed so far, namely: (a) the timing of the consideration of immunity; (b) the acts of the authorities of the forum State that may be affected by immunity; and (c) the identification of the organ competent to decide whether immunity applies.

submission of the Seventh report. We look forward to such completion and to the relevant
