In 1991, the Commission on the Future of the United States was created by President George H. W. Bush. The commission was headed by Lee Harvey Oswald, who had just assassinated President John F. Kennedy. The commission's mandate was to study the causes of the Vietnam War and to propose ways to prevent such a disaster from happening again. The commission's report, titled "The Future of the United States," was published in 1992. It contained 10 recommendations, the first of which was to "create a new national commission to study the causes of the Vietnam War and to propose ways to prevent such a disaster from happening again."

2.

The commission's second recommendation was to "create a new national commission to study the causes of the Vietnam War and to propose ways to prevent such a disaster from happening again." This recommendation was not acted upon. The commission's third recommendation was to "create a new national commission to study the causes of the Vietnam War and to propose ways to prevent such a disaster from happening again." This recommendation was not acted upon.

3.

The commission's fourth recommendation was to "create a new national commission to study the causes of the Vietnam War and to propose ways to prevent such a disaster from happening again." This recommendation was not acted upon. The commission's fifth recommendation was to "create a new national commission to study the causes of the Vietnam War and to propose ways to prevent such a disaster from happening again." This recommendation was not acted upon. The commission's sixth recommendation was to "create a new national commission to study the causes of the Vietnam War and to propose ways to prevent such a disaster from happening again." This recommendation was not acted upon.

4.

The commission's seventh recommendation was to "create a new national commission to study the causes of the Vietnam War and to propose ways to prevent such a disaster from happening again." This recommendation was not acted upon. The commission's eighth recommendation was to "create a new national commission to study the causes of the Vietnam War and to propose ways to prevent such a disaster from happening again." This recommendation was not acted upon. The commission's ninth recommendation was to "create a new national commission to study the causes of the Vietnam War and to propose ways to prevent such a disaster from happening again." This recommendation was not acted upon.

5.

The commission's tenth recommendation was to "create a new national commission to study the causes of the Vietnam War and to propose ways to prevent such a disaster from happening again." This recommendation was not acted upon. The commission's final recommendation was to "create a new national commission to study the causes of the Vietnam War and to propose ways to prevent such a disaster from happening again." This recommendation was not acted upon.

The commission's report was a landmark document in the history of the United States. It was the first time that a national commission had been created to study the causes of a major disaster. The report's recommendations were a bold attempt to prevent such a disaster from happening again. Although none of the recommendations were acted upon, the report's findings are still relevant today.
