Madam Chair,

My delegation aligns itself with the statent delivered by the

Madam Chair,

3. This agenda item continues to remain relevant and reucial for deliberation in the Sixth Committees it strongly relates to the fundamental principles of the rule of law and that allegations are proven beyond reasonable dsopbibr to subjectallel

5. While there is no dispute among States concerning the need to ensure that United Nations officials and experts on mission webon mitcriminal offences are held accountable for their actions urcollective efforts to that end refalling short becaus of several easons

x Firstly, cohesion and consistency of policy and practice across the UN streamlined and coordinated approach within the UN system cannot be over emphasized.

x Two, the issue of accountability of UN officialand experts on missions crosscutting and multifaceted in its nature. While sexual exploitation and abuse is the most vile and heinous expression of abuse, 'criminal accountability' of UN officials and experts on mission a much broader scope- in fact, as the latest report of the Secretary General affirms, a standards of professionalism and conduct. We remain committed to enforce strict discipline, in any cases of reported misconduct.

7. Pakistan was among the first batch of countries to sign the UN's voluntary compact on preexing and addressing sexual exploitation and abuse. Prime Minister Imran Khan is also a member of the circle of leader algapinst sexual exploitation and abuse.

8. We reaffirm the importance of predeployment training of UN officials and experts on Misison. We have developed training modules that form part of the curricula for mandatory courses in respect for human rights and eption of civilians. These efforts are in sync with the UN's own initiatives to strengthen conduct and discipline across all e
