11. Many regional organizations had adopted explicit commitments in support of the responsibility to protect, which include the African Commission on Human and Peoples' Rights, which has recently strengthened the responsibility to protect in Africa. The European Parliament has recommended full implementation of the principle by the European Union. Such efforts need to be strengthened, so that regional organizations become more effective in protecting civilians and providing early warning and early action under the principle.

33. At the international level, more needs to be done, especially support initiatives aimed at reducing the risk of a rocky crisis or responding to the evidence of their imminent collision, as well as to support regional initiatives to prevent and respond to a rocky crisis, including by strengthening partnership with regional and subregional organizations. I encourage the continuation of open and frank discussions aimed at advancing the responsibility
