Second Drafting Session on Third FfD Conference

Civil society interventions on Debt and Debt Sustainability

Statement delivered by Mr. Aldo Caliari, Center of Concern/Jubilee USA Network / CIDSE

Thank you, Mr C Chairman,

The draft missesacknowledging progress on a multilateral legal framework for sovereign debt restructuring registered in the context of the ad hoc committee established by UN GA resolution of September last yearn da commitment for implementation of this resolution. (We realize not all member States as agaged in this process but now the zero draft has several references to other processes where not all members are engaged CD BEPS, Paris Club, G20, even ICMA which is not a public progressives a mention-so t is not justifiable to exclude a process that is going on within the UN and in which as opposed to those other processes I just mentioned members have a right to engage

We think the draft should include language that commits governments to state to address the question of illegitimate and odious deants, where pertinent, have payments of such debts that have early been made returned to countries of origin.

Thank you.

Civil society interventions on Debt and Debt Sustainability

Statement delivered by S. Bhumika Muchhala Senior Policy Analyst, Finance and Development Programme, Third World Network

CoFacilitators and Member states, thanks for this opportunity to contribute.

On the extremely important subject of debt, the zerould place more priority on four key areas where the UNhas ongoing work:

- (1) the UN ad hoc committee on a multilateral framework for sovereign debt restructuring;
- (2) the UNCTAteonvened working group on sovereign debt workouts;
- (3) the Guiding Principles on Forei mebt and Human Rights; and,
- (4) the Principles on Responsible Sovereign Lending and Borrowing.

Paragraphs 83 and 860th have the potential to make a very significant link betweebt sustainability and the ability of a country to finance implementation o

a fundamental gap and weakess of the international financial architecture
