

Multi-annual Indicative Programme: 2000-2006

... ..

... ..

... ..

... ..

... ..

... ..

... ..

... ..

... ..

... ..

... ..

... ..

... ..

that each country had the primary responsibility for its own development and needed to take steps to improve its economic situation.

The document also stated that the international community should support the efforts of developing countries to improve their economic situation and to achieve self-reliance.

The document also stated that the international community should support the efforts of developing countries to improve their economic situation and to achieve self-reliance.

The document also stated that the international community should support the efforts of developing countries to improve their economic situation and to achieve self-reliance.

The document also stated that the international community should support the efforts of developing countries to improve their economic situation and to achieve self-reliance.

The document also stated that the international community should support the efforts of developing countries to improve their economic situation and to achieve self-reliance.

The document also stated that the international community should support the efforts of developing countries to improve their economic situation and to achieve self-reliance.

The document also stated that the international community should support the efforts of developing countries to improve their economic situation and to achieve self-reliance.

The document also stated that the international community should support the efforts of developing countries to improve their economic situation and to achieve self-reliance.

The document also stated that the international community should support the efforts of developing countries to improve their economic situation and to achieve self-reliance.

The document also stated that the international community should support the efforts of developing countries to improve their economic situation and to achieve self-reliance.

The document also stated that the international community should support the efforts of developing countries to improve their economic situation and to achieve self-reliance.