

From Cairo to Addis: Migration, labour mobility and the renewed global partnership for sustainable development

Convened by

The Troika of the Global Forum on Migration and Development in partnership with the Global Migration Group and the Office of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for International Migration

United Nations, New York, 16 April 2015 Un34(pre)-4(al)-3(f) 2015 (16) Top (16 a) in order to protect the human rights of migrants and enhance the positive effects of this en for global sustainable development. Specifically, the Global Forum recommended that mig and migration-related issues should be integrated in the post-2015 development agenda in following ways: (1) in the declaration of the post-2015 development agenda; (2) as a mea implement the new development goals; (3) within the context of poverty eradication, educa health, decent work, and equality, and (4) through disaggregated reporting of the develop outcomes by migratory status.

While the global community has thus made important strides in recognizing the contributi international migration for human and sustainable development, limited recognition of transformative nature of migration and its contribution to development has been given in intergovernmental negotiations on the means of implementation and the financing development.

This side-event will explore how migration, including expanded avenues for regular la mobility, reduction in related costs, portability of earned social security benefits and recogn of skills, can generate substantial additional resources for development and boost dispo incomes.

The

