

GUIDANCE FOR THE PREPARATION OF NATIONAL REPORTS

Structure and organization of reports:

- I. Introduction
- II. Our Global Contributions
- III. Contributions of States to the Millennium Development Goals

The introduction covers a broad spectrum of issues beyond the presentation of the cooperation between the relevant authorities. Consequently, the preparation of national reports may require a close collaboration with institutions and structures such as the environment, economic development, finance, education, statistics and other national focal points or FfA, the Faculty of Economics and Business Administration.

For reports prepared by the following:

- The FfA members are the primary stakeholders by the FfA members.
- In order to avoid duplication of work, the national reports should not be redundant but should provide a clear and concise response to the questions contained in the report or at least provide a clear and concise response to the relevant parts of the report.
- The national reports should be submitted to the relevant national authorities and should be consistent with the national reports of the relevant countries.
- The national reports should be submitted to the relevant national authorities and should be consistent with the national reports of the relevant countries.
- The national reports should be submitted to the relevant national authorities and should be consistent with the national reports of the relevant countries.
- The national reports should be submitted to the relevant national authorities and should be consistent with the national reports of the relevant countries.
