

Statement by H.E. Mr. Arjun Bahadur Thapa, Deputy Permanent Representative of the Kingdom of Nepal to the United Nations (30 April 2003)

Mr. Chairman,

Allow me to extend my warm congratulations on your election as Chairman of the 25th session of the Committee on Information. I would also like to felicitate the newly elected members of the Bureau.

My delegation expresses its sincere appreciation to the Secretary General for his comprehensive reports. I will be failing in my duty if I do not commend the Under-Secretary-General for Communications and Public Information, Mr. Shashi Tharoor, for his comprehensive remarks on the road map the Department of Information has drawn up for itself.

We align ourselves with the statement of the Kingdom of Morocco delivered on behalf of the Group of 77 and China.

Mr. Chairman,

It goes without saying that the DPI serves as the lynch-pin of the United Nations System in creating public awareness about the myriad activities that the world body undertakes on a day-to-day basis in the interest of global peace, security and development. Thanks to the extensive UN information network, people all over the world have access to reliable means of knowledge and information that touch our lives on a daily basis.

The reform measures being implemented to strengthen and rationalize the DPI are showing results, enhancing ordinary people's awareness about what the UN is doing to make our lives better. We cannot but agree with the Secretary General that the DPI, with the welcome addition of Strategic Communications Division, News and Media Division and Outreach Division, has been successful in promoting synergy and repositioning itself as a refurbished and dedicated Department. No doubt, these developments will go a long way to leverage the activities in fulfilling the DPI's objectives.

In a similar vein, the new mission statement for the department aimed at fulfilling the substantive purposes of the United Nations is encouraging. With the United Nations Millennium Declaration as the guiding precept, the DPI's renewed focus on such cross-cutting issues as poverty eradication, conflict prevention, sustainable development, human rights, HIV/AIDS, terrorism, and needs of the African continent is a pointer to the right way forward.

Mr. Chairman,

We support the new operations among centers to the developing countries. As such, these centers serve as an effective medium to promote public awareness around the world. In developing countries, especially in least developed and low income countries, these centers remain vital source of information in general and UN related information in particular. Hence, the need for strengthening them in developing countries in consultation with the host countries cannot be overemphasized.

Likewise, it is a fact that traditional means of communications such as the radio has the most impressive outreach to the vast majority of peoples in developing countries.
