Chairwoman of the Commission

Mr. Chair

Distinguished Delegates,

1. It is an honour for me to address the 55th session of the Commission on the Status of Women on behalf of the Greek Government and especially on its first session since the establishment of UN Women, the United Nations entity for gender equality and the empowerment of women.

2. The Greek Government and Prime Minister Mr. George Papandreou extend their warmest congratulations and thanks to Ms. Michelle Bachelet and to the work of UN Women for the advancement of women and for the benefit of humanity.

3. There is a growing number of countries which make active use of new interventions with regard to the global level on many occasions since the 1995 Beijing Platform for Action and the outcome documents of the World Conference, Commissions and intergovernmental bodies have often referred to the role of Information Communication Technology (ICT), Democracy, Democracy and Human Rights.

4. I would like to highlight the role of Information Communication Technology (ICT), worldwide, such as google, e-mail, facebook, youtube, myspace, twitter, mobile phones, etc. in Africa for democracy and human rights and the role of women and especially young women in the struggle for democracy participation and women's human rights.

5. In this era of economic crisis the Greek government endures tremendous difficulties, struggling to overcome the crisis and socio-economic. Our national mechanism, the General Secretariat for Gender Equality has launched a Programme for Substantive Gender Equality for the period 2010-2013 which has been drafted with our strategic goals in mind:

- Protection of all women's rights through the promotion of gender equality and the orientation of interventions towards groups of women facing multiple discrimination.

Prevention and combatting of all forms and types of violence against women.

- Support of women's employment and their financial independence.
- Utilisation of cultural creation in order to highlight the goal of gender equality.

At this moment the Greek Government is working intensively on the following agenda:

1. Drafting the Bill on Substantive Gender Equality expected to be completed by 2011. The purpose of this Bill is to consolidate all gender equality laws, to unify gender equality legislation, to adapt it to the new EU Directive on gender equality.

2. Launching a Match for International Women's Day, providing consultation and first aid to women victims of violence.

3. A funding programme for NGOs to promote action plans in the critical areas of: supporting women, multiple discrimination, environment and innovation, women and the media.

4. With regard to the issue of women's access to ICT, we are in the process of providing 20.000 personal computers, access to internet and training of basic internet skills to 20.000 women aged from 40 to 65 who are unemployed or economically inactive.

7. Multiple discrimination is an area of high concern of the Government. An area difficult to tackle because of the consequences of the economic crisis on vulnerable groups (aged workers, women leaving economic activities, mothers, disabled people), but not only due to the economic crisis. Among these groups migration and refugees are of particular urgency. Poverty, changing climate change, environmental destruction are the root causes for immigration of thousands of people, women and men leaving their countries. Greece is a better future for many like Greece, a receiving country, in the middle of a huge economic crisis, needs the full support of all EU countries and cooperation of all countries to develop a policy to address increasing migration.
