56th Session of the Commission on the Status of Women

5 March 2012

Statement by Ms. Flaminia Scattolon Mazzoni

Counsellor

(Check Against Delivery)

Madame Chairwoman,

I am honored to address the Fifty-Sixth Session of the Commission on the Status of Women on behalf of the Sovereign Military Order of Malta. The Order would like to commend the Commission on its important work and congratulates the members of the Bureau for their knowledgeable leadership of this Session.

Combating poverty, disease and suffering, regardless of gender, race, religion or nationality, has been at the heart of the Order's activities for more than 900 years. The Order's many projects in hospitals, clinics and services run by 100,000 trained volunteers, doctors and medical personnel make up an extensive network permanently present in 120 countries, often in rural areas where health facilities are lacking. The Order is committed to using this network of medical services to improve the lives of women.

Madame Chair,

The Order of Malta finds it unacceptable that every year around the world approximately 100,000 women die from childbirth or pregnancy-related complications. 99 percent of these maternal deaths occur in developing countries. This is partly due to a lack of satisfactory healthcare facilities and education. One of the focuses of the Order is to establish and promote primary healthcare services. The Order's hospital in Bethlehem has recently celebrated its twentieth year of service to women and mankind, and possesses the only neonatal department in the Palestinian territories. The Order has also recently initiated a 24-hour neonatal and prenatal clinic in rural Pakistan. This important clinic provides healthcare for pregnant women around the clock in an area where the nearest facilities are over 20 kilometers away.

The Order also runs mother and child clinics in other rural and impoverished areas around the globe. These clinics provide pre- and post-natal education, vaccinations and feeding programs for manou is now used by children in Côte d'Ivoire, who work to prevent HIV/AIDS transmission from mother to child when necessary. These mother-child clinics and medical programs exist in the Dominican Republic, Haiti, Mexico, Cameroon, Congo, Sudan, South Sudan and many other countries.

Madame Chair,

The Order of Malta has also been instrumental in providing essential services to those who have experienced violence against them. The Order is working tangibly to provide services for its victims. In Syria, the Order has initiated a child protection project at Bab al-Tawrah and Damascus. The Order also runs a center for the protection of young girls in Aleppo. In the Democratic Republic of the Congo where rape has often been used as an instrument of war, the Order has also extended its activities in medical and psychological support for these victims of sexual violence.

Madame Chair,

The Order of Malta recognizes that the status of women must also be improved through the promotion of gender equality, particularly in education and economic participation. The Order has initiated projects in Viet Nam, where women will be provided with educational support for alternate means of income. In Namibia, the Order submitted a proposal to establish a sewing school for women whose husbands died from AIDS, so that they can provide for themselves. In South Sudan, the Order has helped to build a secondary school principally designated for the education of girls. The Order of Malta pledges to continue to increase its involvement in improving the socioeconomic standing of women around the world.

Madame Chair,

In summary, the Sovereign Order of Malta, the Order of Malta has worked tirelessly through providing healthcare clinics and educational services to women and girls within rural communities. Although much progress has been made, there is still much work to be done on this pertinent topic of global protection of women and girls. The Order of Malta is grateful for this opportunity for exchange and looks ahead to further collaboration with the United Nations, Member States, NGOs and other groups to strengthen the global protection of women and girls.
