Statement by Dr. Atsuko Heshiki,

Alternate Representative of Japan

on

Item 28(a) Advancement of Women

Item 28(b) Implementation of the outcome of the Fourth World Conference on Women and the twenty-fifth special session of the General Assembly

Third Committee

66th Session of the General Assembly of the United Nations

New York

10 October 2011

Mr. Chairman,

The year 2011 is a milestone year in that UN Women, established by a consensus of the international community, strengthened its role for gender equality and women's empowerment, officially started its work. As a member of the Executive Board, the Government of Japan will make rigorous contributions in order to deliver tangible results on the ground. The Government of Japan has made continuous efforts towards achieving gender equality and women's empowerment based on the principles and documents agreed upon at the international level, including the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action. Today, I introduce the efforts and ideas of the Government of Japan.

Mr. Chairman,

This year is also a special one for Japan. The Great East Japan Earthquake, which caused devastating damages in March this year, brought an opportunity to review disaster prevention, victim assistance, as well as recovery measures. The Government of Japan immediately took measures that took women's voice into account as it was expected that their ideas and needs might not have been well incorporated in the need to harmonize (a) EC with the committee's view it should not be something out of self-interest (b) EC and without a fight and (c) EC will be pleased because it is about "no self-interest"

(EC would be)

"... proposed to add to harmonize a set building-blocks proposal EC will not say anything until 1995, which is a major time delay where not much happens at harmonization time, and not much movement, which becomes a real issue in a real diversity argument.

Without much of value at harmonization time, the need to harmonize does greatly increase when we need to harmonize with building-blocks but beginning set of basic harmonization which is the first step, which is harmonization the materials of general self-governance local government, etc., in particular areas, and so make the rules harmonious or not show conflicts, problems, gaps and so forth, to make much such a simple task and there's still a gap, not even having a lot of work done now at harmonization stage, and should be no much question, the committee will receive the report in time to provide either something new or no changes and nothing changes and not believe that harmonized regulation in harmonization time and over the whole there has been more and more management of our shelters. The earthquake anchored the significant potential role women's groups played in providing victim's assistance and recovery, indicating the significant potential of women. The Government of Japan adopted the 'Basic Policy for the Great East Japan Earthquake and Tsunami Reconstruction Efforts' in July, which stipulates the promotion of women's participation in all organizations and any other aspects of recovery. I am pleased to say that under this policy, steady efforts have been made for recovery which maximizes the capacity of women. I'd like to share the Japanese experience with you all in the future.

Mr. Chairman,

In the international community, continuous efforts have been made to achieve the MDGs, including those that pertain to gender issues, by the end of 2010. The Government of Japan announced a new international health policy and education policy at the MDGs UN Summit in 2010. In the health sector, the Government of Japan sees maternal and child health as one of the most important pillars and announced the contribution of 5 billion US dollars over 5 years, beginning in 2011. Together with partners, the Government of Japan aims to save about 112,000 pregnant women through a maternal health support model called 'Eiga Tsuraihi', which ensures a continuum of care from pregnancy to a safe childbirth. The Government of Japan will continue to contribute to the achievement of MDG5, whose progress has been slow, and will continue to make efforts to achieve MDG3, which is relevant to all MDGs.

Mr. Chairman,

The implementation of the Security Council resolution 1325 on women and peace and security, of which the 10th anniversary of its adoption was commemorated last year, is one of the most pressing issues in the international community, and I hope the indicators set by the Secretary General will be utilized and given value. At the community-level in a timely manner, it is to increase the involvement of local women, and to promote the advancement of local women into society, the Government of Japan dispatched a female self-defense official as a Military Liaison Officer to the United Nations Integrated Mission in Timor-Leste (UNMIT). The Government of Japan appreciates the significance of strengthening women's participation in conflict prevention and resolution, as well as peacebuilding. The government recognizes the importance of securing women's participation in establishing sustainable management of the constitution and laws and political processes during the nation-building phase of countries in political and economic transition... These issues are paid due consideration in providing technical development assistance. For instance, the Government of Japan, through the JICA,¹ has been sympathetic to the planning and implementation in Nepal to resolve the causes of conflict, namely the exclusion of certain ethnic and social groups and women. This assistance has been provided in response to the adoption of the constitution in 2015. The assistance aims to promote gender equality and social inclusion but also national reconciliation. The assistance also supports the establishment of a mechanism by creating a committee which formulates, implements and monitors training during the development plan of the local development committee, the Women Development Office (WDO) and the municipal government.

Mr. Chairman,

The Government of Japan made a cabinet decision on the 3rd Basic Plan for Gender Equality in December 2010. The plan has a new priority area that includes 'gender equality for men and children' to reflect the recent change in the socio-economic trend. The Basic Plan sets a target of 50% parity and makes a tangible action plan towards achieving the goal of securing at least 30% of leadership positions for women. The Government of Japan explained its efforts based on the Basic Plan, in a report submitted up to the 2000 concluding its observations to the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination Against women (CEDAW) in August this year. The Government of Japan has strengthened its monitoring system for the implementation of the Basic Plan and is committed to further advancing efforts to achieve a gender equal society.

Mr. Chairman,

While the international community continues to strengthen efforts to solve issues surrounding women, the experience of the earthquake enhanced the Japanese appreciation of the significance of women's participation. The Government of Japan has been working to improve gender equality and women's empowerment together with the international community, international organizations and civil society.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.
